Caitlin represents companies and individuals in a broad range of white collar matters, with a particular focus on the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act and anti-corruption compliance. She regularly works with companies to develop and enhance their corporate compliance programs. She has experience developing policies and procedures, enhancing training programs, and advising on best practices related to third party management and internal controls. She also has experience navigating FCPA monitorships, having represented a multinational company under the review of an independent compliance monitor.

Caitlin's practice also involves conducting internal investigations, representing clients in matters before the U.S. Department of Justice and U.S. Securities & Exchange Commission, and performing anti-corruption due diligence. She has represented companies around the world in the medical device, oil and gas, pharmaceutical, and technology industries.

Prior to attending law school, Caitlin was a Fulbright scholar in France.
